College still in search of site

The price might not be right for Shasta College, which is still considering whether or not to invest in land Mayers Memorial Hospital District owns in Burney for a new Distance Education Center.

A preliminary $380,000 estimate to buy the land, prepare the site, install a relocatable classroom, and pay water and sewer hook-up costs has caused some hesitation, said Shasta College Interim President Tom Harris, Jr.

"That slowed us down, but nothing has been eliminated and it's still under consideration," Harris said.

Leasing the three lots that the hospital owns off Commerce Way across from the Crossroads Clinic is an option.

Shasta College is also looking at other property in Burney, Harris said.

Plans to open the outreach center in the former Lyons Pharmacy building, which Shasta College purchased, fell through when they learned the building does not meet the state's new seismic regulations.

Burney Fire Chief Bob May describes to Mt. Burney Theater owner Donna Sylvester early Monday where fire was making its way through the southeast side of her business.

$50,000 damage to movie theater

BY MEG FOX

It was the early morning, bad news knock on the door that everyone dreads.

"They knocked on my door, woke me up, and asked for the keys to the theater because it was on fire," said Mt. Burney Theater owner Donna Sylvester, as she stood on the snow-dampened pavement Monday, watching firefighters hack away at the side of her restored building.

By mid-morning, most of the 25 volunteer firefighters had gone home and Sylvester was cleaning up and planning to open her movie theater for an evening show.

A passerby noticed smoke streaming from the 63-year-old building and reported the fire to the CHP at 6:35 a.m.

Burney Fire Chief Bob May estimated damage at about $50,000.

The fire burned in a parapet wall above the theater's snack bar, but there was minimal smoke and water damage in the theater and it didn't smell like smoke, May said.

At 74, volunteer still fighting fires,

Firefighters tore down an exterior section on the side of the building to try to get to the source and determine the cause. May said he suspects the cause was electrical and related to the pink neon lights lining the front of the building.

In addition to two engines and an ambulance from the Burney Fire Protection District, where Sylvester serves as a fire commissioner, the Cassel and Hat Creek volunteer fire companies and an engine from the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection responded.

There are still a few tickets left for the Burney-Fall River Education Foundation's full moon dessert train Nov 11.

The Foundation is serving a variety of delectable desserts on its second evening excursion on the McCloud River Railroad.

Boarding begins at 5:30 p.m. with the rains departing promptly at 6:00 p.m. from Black Ranch Road off Highway 299 east of Burney.

The train will travel across the Lake Britton bridge and through the Cayton Valley on a two-hour round trip moonlight excursion.

Tickets are $25.

The event is a fundraiser for the Foundation's mini-grant program, which funds special projects and equipment in local schools.

The Foundation hosted a successful train ride with hors d'oeuvres Oct. 21.

At 74, Bea Berchem, assistant fire chief for the Cassel Volunteer Fire Department, hasn't let her age dampen her spirit for dousing fires.

The call came at 3 a.m. last week to head to Southern California where 800,000 acres in five counties were on fire, and Berchem joined some 14,000 other firefighters tackling what most have said were the worst fires they've seen in their careers.

"It was the first time I'd seen anything like this," said Berchem, who has been a volunteer firefighter for 23 years.

"It burned so many homes and put so many people into shelters who were needing food and clothing.

"We saw flames. Lots of flames. And then the rains came and saved us," she said Sunday, back at home after seven days of fighting fire in Simi Valley, north of Los Angeles.

Burney Fire Chief Bob May, who led a five-engine strike team in San Diego County, called the Burney fire hall mid-week to say he, too, had never seen anything like the Southern California fires in his career.

"You can't see. All you can do is feel heat," he told Lt. Rick Moore on the phone, although by late Saturday he and the others had returned to Burney.

On Oct. 26, Cassel Engine No. 10, with Fire Chief Don Chaix, firefighter Jim Miguel, and Berchem joined five other engines from Shasta County in a strike team led by Shasta Lake Fire Protection District Chief Fred Wyckoff.

Chief May had Burney firefighters Lt. Courtney Cleckler, Lt. Matt Scheckla, Brian Ludwick, and Darryl Conover on his team, along with engines and personnel from Redding, Mt. Shasta, and Hammond Ranch fire departments.

They were diverted en route "to a small community of about 3,000 people that was in danger," said Moore, who was among the Burney firefighters assigned to "hard cover" at the fire station.

Moore, Larry Armstrong, Howard Fincher, Zaylnn Baker, Robbie Owens, and Gabe Shaw moved into the fire hall for several days last week to be available for additional and immediate response if necessary.

"If something breaks, we're on the road," said Moore, adding that this was the first hard cover assignment anyone in the department could remember.

Fincher and Baker were also ready to leave Friday to relieve two Burney firefighters as the week wore on and firefighters wore out.

May, the Burney firefighters, and the rest of that strike team arrived at the Ramona staging area Oct. 28 and were assigned to the 281,666acre Cedar fire, the largest in California history.

"It was the most amount of fire I've seen in my career with burning vegetation and structures all at one time.

"It was very difficult to watch people (losing their) homes and possessions," May said.

His team "stayed on the line" from 11 a.m. Oct. 28 to 8 a.m. Oct. 29 protecting about 100 homes –Please See Page 4

Full agenda on tap for F.R. trustees

The trustees for the Fall River Joint Unified School District have a full agenda tonight - including considering approval, again but in open session, the controversial one-time distribution of funds to teachers and other staff - when they meet at the District office in Burney.

Five student expulsion hearings are slated at 5:30 p.m. before the public portion of the meeting begins.

Also on the agenda is a request for class size relief, an update on the district's athletic fundraising activities, and a request to buy a copier with one-time funds.

WIN-WIN AGREEMENTS

When you are ready to negotiate a home purchase agreement, it's important to remember that a successful negotiation does not necessarily mean everyone gets what they want and no one goes home disappointed. "Win-win" is an easily misunderstood term. In a real-lie "win-win" situation, some compromises are inevitable in the process of all parties coming to a fundmental agreement. The secret to negotiating a satisfactory purchase contract is to expect to make some concessions at the bargaining table.

Approach the meeting with a positive, open-minded attitude. Try to listen and stay sensitive to the other's point of view. Be clear about your priorities, but don't expect to prevail on every point. The more you remain flexible, the better your chance for a fair compromise. When you become stuck on a point of contention as minor as the cost of painting the picket fence, be willing to split the difference. Above all, trust your real estate agent, who has the expertise to bring the proceedings to a happy resolution.

resident Burney Jim Casaurang of the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection in Johnson Park also led a strike team in San Diego County, according to Battalion Chief Tim McCammon, who stayed behind as operations chief on Monday's local 1,100-acre Whitmore Fire.

In fact, Berchem said the Cassel crew saw Casaurang on their way to Simi Valley. "He honked his horn. It was good to see a face we knew."

The Lassen National Forest, Hat Creek Ranger District, also sent engines and personnel to Southern California, where fires were burning on the San Bernardino, the Los Padres, the Cleveland, and Angeles National Forests.

"They were using the CDF and the U.S. Forest Service for perimeter control to work the edges to control this thing," McCammon said. Local fire department engines and crews were on the structure fires.

Debbie Mayer, field management officer for the Hat Creek Ranger District, said Thursday that forest service personnel were rotated and reassigned during the fire.

"We had a strike team of engines assigned to the Whitmore fire and then they were reassigned to Southern California," she said.

Some were on the 91,281acre Old fire in San Bernardino County, others, like her husband Greg Mayer, were on the 63,991-acre Piru fire on the Los Padres National Forest in Ventura County.

Another group, including Billy Morgan, Les White, Jessica Saltzman, Mike Gaither, and John Wheeler, were sent on Engine No. 31 to the Paradise fire in San Diego County.

Berchem is proud of the fact that the strike team she was with did not lose a single structure.

"A few minutes later, he was on the roof with the garden hose again. A Shasta County Fire Department engine rumbled down the street and stopped in front of Day's house. Two firefighters unrolled hoses and bolted down the side of the home and into the back yard.

"The truck, driven by 74-year-old volunteer Bea Berchem, was greeted with cheers by the Day children. A helicopter buzzed over and dumped more water on the fire. Orange flames were replaced by white smoke. The Shasta firefighters opened up their hoses and soaked a few hot spots. Then, another drop.

"Nice shot," Kevin Day said."

The Cassel volunteer department is one of 19 Shasta County companies on a rotating call list.

"If you can get enough personnel together, vou're offered the chance to go (when mutual aid is needed)," Berchem said, and then thought about whether an offered chance was the right phrase to use in this case.

The Cassel firefighters were also dispatched to save the town of Mentryville, a pioneer oil town established in 1876 in the Santa Clarita Valley and home to the first commercially successful oil well in the western United States.

"Flames were shooting right over the top of us. About 60 engines covered both sides of the town and we saved every single building. It was one really big save and absolutely remarkable," she said.

Cassel Fire Chief Don Chaix said being boxed into a little canyon surrounded by fire at Mentryville was the worst fire he has been in in his 20 years of firefighting.

Adding to the intensity was the strike team person who told each of the firefighters at Mentryville that they could not "cut and run (from the scene) no matter what."

Berchem, on 24-hour coverage, had her first shower on her third day out. "A trailer comes by with five portable showers and they hand you a paper towel.

Before more of Southern California could burn, the weather abruptly changed and early winter was a welcome miracle.

"The snow came on Saturday. It rained and then it snowed. Happy day!

"Big Bear, which had been burning merrily the day before, got three inches. If they hadn't gotten that precipitation, they said we would have been there for three more weeks."

Whitmore fire suspect in hospital

BY MEG FOX

A suspect in last week's Whitmore fire was in critical condition at Mercy Medical Center in Redding Monday following a traffic accident on I-5 near Cottonwood

Fire Prevention Capt. David Harp of the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection headquarters in Redding said the 1,100acre blaze six miles northeast of the community of Whitmore was human-caused.

Harp declined to give the suspect's name.

In record 90-degree heat Oct. 27, someone in Whitmore smelled smoke and called 911 at 11:15 p.m.

Twenty-three hours later, the blaze that broke out on WM Beaty & Associates land was contained.

"It's a success story and we were very fortunate," said Battalion Chief Tim McCammon of CDF in Johnson Park.

"We put a line around it, corralled the fire and put it out. That's the way it's supposed to work," said McCammon, who was operations

Along with the local CDF, the Cassel, Old Station, Hat Creek, and Montgomery Creek volunteer fire companies responded with personnel and water tenders and were among the 1,146 firefighters on the scene.

"We were in several areas where flames were shooting into houses, but everyone congregates and foams down the houses and puts water on and we did not lose a house. We were in the right place at the right time (for those structures)" she said.

Because an energetic, firefighting woman in her 70's is not the usual sight on a fire, Berchem attracted some media attention and was filmed by ABC and NBC television.

She and Shasta County also had a mention in the Oct. 28 edition of the Ventura County Star in the following from an article by reporter David Montero:

"Kevin Day asked aloud where the fire department was. Down the street, fire crews were holding off a front threatening homes in a culde-sac. He said he feared the

"They need you, so you go. It's a grueling experience, but one that makes you feel good," she said.

A lot of what fire crews do is 'grunt work.' We're not always putting out fires. Sometimes we'd go in after a fire had been through an area, looking for embers. We're also chopping and cutting.'

Fourteen hours after leaving Redding, the Cassel crew saw flames near Six Flags Magic Mountain in Valencia.

"The next day the wind got the fire moving and from there on it was a job and a half. The fire traveled 26 miles. The whole Simi Valley was on fire, all the way around," Berchem said.

"They gave us rest periods, but we always had to be dressed and ready to go."

Sometimes she slept outside on the ground in a sleeping bag. When she and other firefighters were lucky enough to spend a night in camp, they were up at 6 a.m. and were fed breakfast and given a lunch to eat when they could.

"It was not the Waldorf, but it kept you alive," said Berchem.

But the locals treated the firefighters better than any first-class hotel staff.

"I can't get over how they treated us. They brought truckloads of pizzas, and truckloads of hamburgers. Someone had 100 dozen doughnuts and went from group to group giving them out. A Chinese restaurant delivered a carton of food to

As a Red Cross volunteer Berchem said she might also have been someone assigned to help in the shelters if she hadn't first been called out as a firefighter.

And having worked in emergency shelters, she had sympathy and concern for the 100,000 people who were evacuated.

"Halloween was Friday and a company donated 1.000 costumes for the kids in the shelters. Other companies gave away candy and prizes and games. It was pretty touching," she said.

She was also touched by the support from passers-by as the Cassel engine and crew were heading home on 1-5.

A Place to Call Home Seabird Habitats

What is a habitat?

A habitat is a place where animals can live and reproduce. Habitats range from oceans to desert, from mountains to prairies. They provide animals with: · food

- · water
- · places to hide
- nesting places

· material to make nests protection from heat and cold

Some species need other things, too. For example, most songbirds need something to perch on.

Seabirds, or birds that live on or near the sea, need a habitat that is free of mammals. For that reason they usually nest on islands too far out for mammals to swim to.

Experts believe an alarming number of plants and animals on Earth are at risk. One of the main reasons they are at risk is the destruction of their habitats. Human development and the growth of cities are main causes of habitat destruction.

Geography Awareness Week will be celebrated from Nov. 16-22. Its theme is "Habitats: Home Sweet Home."

The Mini Page talked to Dr. Stephen W. Kress, director of Project Puffin, to find out about seabird habitats, and especially about puffins.

Dangers to seabird habitats

There are about 300 species of mammals to islands where seabirds nest. Rats and cats are especially big problems because they eat chicks and eggs.

Seabird habitats can also be destroyed when the ocean rises and floods the islands. Global warming is a cause of rising oceans.

One hurricane can wipe out a species. Oil spills also destroy island habitats as well as destroying the fish the birds need to eat.

Everybody Loves the Puffin

The Atlantic puffin's big beak is useful for carrying small fish home to feed its young. The known record for the most fish in one Atlantic puffin's bill is 62.

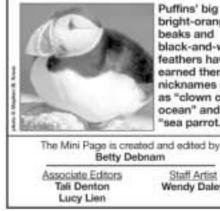

Puffin facts

The name "puffin" comes from the word for "fatling," a nickname for fat little chicks.

There are four species in the world: the Atlantic puffin, horned puffin, tufted puffin and rhinoceros auklet. The Atlantic puffin is the only species living on the Atlantic Ocean. The rest live on the Pacific Ocean.

Puffins are great swimmers. When they dive for fish, they can stay underwater for as long as one minute. They use their wings to swim, seeming to fly under water.

They can drink salt water from the ocean, and they eat small fish.

Puffins' big bright-orange beaks and black-and-white feathers have earned them hicknames such as "clown of the ocean" and "sea parrot."

Staff Artist Wendy Daley

Pufflings and parents

Puffins make their nests under boulders on islands. If there are no boulders, they may dig burrows in the soil.

They lay only one egg a year. It takes about six weeks for the egg to hatch, and then about another six to 16 weeks for the parents to raise the chick, or puffling.

Both parents help care for the puffling. Males and females usually remain mated to the same partner. They return to the same burrow each year to lay their new egg.

When they are about 6 weeks old, puffins fly out to the ocean, where they live for two to three years. When they are about 5 years old, they are ready to breed. They then return to an area near where they were hatched to raise pufflings of their own.

Adult puffins usually spend the winter on the ocean, returning to land in the summer to breed. Scientists know very little about their lives on the ocean.

Once they grow up, pufflings may fly hundreds of miles from their nesting site to live on the ocean.

Adults are about as tall as a guart of milk, and weigh about as much as a can of soda.

Puffin perils

People love puffins. They love their looks and even love their cute name. But people are the biggest threat to puffins.

Overhunting of puffins has wiped out whole colonies. Overfishing can destroy the puffins' food supply. Global warming threatens their coldwater habitat and food supplies.

The great black-backed gull is the main puffin predator. It can attack puffins as they fly. Gulls might also steal a puffin's food, egg and chick.

Burney was back in form Thursday sending the Trinity Wolves scampering, 3-1, in Weaverville and scoring 25-12, 23-25, 25-20, and 25-11.

"Even in the game that we lost we were at 21-10 at one point and came back to lose (by only two points). The girls were playing very well. Our serving, with 19 aces, made the difference," Giachetti said.

Stuffed moles assist in chemistry class

NOTE: Fall River Junior-Senior High School English teacher Kenneth Howes submitted the following article about a unique mole project in Barbara Sugaya Jones' chemistry class.

The article is in keeping with the school's goal of improving communication, stated as part of its Western Association of Schools and Colleges (WASC) accreditation, to give the community and parents a view inside the school, - and because Mr. Howes enjoys writing.

BY KENNETH HOWES

That woman has certainly got moles. She's got a lot of moles. She's got moles coming out everywhere! No, this isn't some beauty queen bursting with marks to prove it, nor a leper huddled under a blanket in Beirut.

This is a dedicated professional, working to teach your children chemistry, and in doing so the students in Barbara Sugaya-Jones' chemistry classes at Fall River High School in McArthur have been creating moles for many years.

These moles have all been hand-fabricated by interested and dedicated chemistry students.

There is one mole riding in a hot air balloon, one mole speeding along in its Batmolebile, and a James Brown mole sporting a tremendous Afro.

There are various caped and crusading Super Moles, delicate moles in evening attire, assorted surfer moles, and even an amoebae mole with clear plastic sides for easy viewing of the mole's innards, which leads us to the reason for this chemistry teacher to have so many moles in the first place:

Avogadro's number is the number of things in one "mole," and this number is 6.02 multiplied by 10 to the 23rd power. For the uninitiated, this is the number 602 followed by 21 zeros.

This nearly unimaginable number has become nearly mundane to the chemistry students in Sugaya-Jones' class, as it is vital to their study of chemistry. One mole of carbon-12 atoms has a mass of 12.0 grams and is made up of 6.02 \tilde{x} 10²³ atoms of carbon. If that's confusing, don't worry; ask your child when they get to chemistry.

In the meantime, understand that in the construction of these handmade moles the student is to take a nano-pico mole of ordinary beans (that's 602 beans, if you hadn't figured it out), and create a stuffed mole of the animal variety.

Of course, one's mole should have personality, hence the hairdo choices and variety of activities the students have their moles undertake.

Student Jackie McArthur, who is somehow crossbreeding a mole and a cow for some burrowing bovine, says, "I'm not very creative, so it's hard for me, but it's fun and different with the sewing and bean counting to understand the mole, instead of just taking it out of the book." And Tim Arnold, another student, with his Bob Marley Reggae mole, said, "This project allows the students to escape everyday homework while still learning about chemistry."

Sugaya-Jones believes that since the mole is so fundamental to the study of chemistry, that creating the stuffed moles themselves, making stories about them, and eating food in relation to moles makes an emotional connection between the kids and the subject matter.

And with ginger molasses cookies and guacamole and chips served on Mole Day, Oct. 23, chemistry does find its way into the heart through the stomach.

Sugaya-Jones another motive in hoping that the population of Moletown will grow: perhaps when it reaches a mole of moles, she will be able to retire. In case you're alarmed at losing such a great teacher, don't worry.

At a growth rate of 20 moles per year, it will take her just about 3 x 10²² years to leave her classroom ... overflowing with cute, happy and intelligent moles.

Students provide shoulder for furry friends used in Fall River High School chemistry class.
